

Sheep on the Loose: The 19th Amendment

Many of the suffragists would hold signs or carry banners. Many would wear a button to let people know women should have the right to vote.

Make a button for yourself! Let people know how you feel about the right to vote for all people. Use the patterns below. You can use your favorite colors because your button is whatever YOU want. Have fun!

Meet Saxon the Suffrage Cat

The picture of a cat was often used by the people of England when they were AGAINST suffrage. In 1918, when Woodrow Wilson was president, two women suffragists, Nell Richardson and Alice Burke, made a cross country trip. The women would stop along the way and speak to people about the need for women's suffrage here in the United States. At one stop, the two adopted a black cat as a mascot. The cat's name was Saxon, named after the maker of the car they were driving.

You can now create your own mascot. You will find an outline of a cat. Color it any way you want but be sure to give the cat a name that means something to YOU. What will be the name of your suffrage cat?
