

Draw your own Presidential Pup!

Did you know Woodrow Wilson loved dogs and grew up having many kinds? He owned dogs in the White House, along with cats as well. Woodrow Wilson loved his dog, Mountain Boy, so much that he drew a picture of Mountain Boy to keep with him. Mountain boy was a constant companion and was known as a spotted greyhound.

"T.W. Wilson's Greyhound Mountain Boy." Drawn by Woodrow Wilson, date unknown. Courtesy of the WWPL Collection

Now, try your hand at drawing your own favorite dog! If you don't have one of your own, try drawing a picture of one of the many "First Dogs" who have lived in the White House. If you need some help, check out our dog outlines and color those! Remember to share and tag Woolly and the Woodrow Wilson Presidential Library on social media!

